Comments by Kunal :

Nilasaraswati is a form of Goddess Tara, the second deity in the list of famous Dashamahavidya. Her iconography is close to Goddess Kali as opposed to the same of Goddess Saraswati in the Vedas. Other popular forms of Goddess Tara are Tarini and Ugra-Tara.

Devi Nilasaraswati is the Ishta-devi of sage Vashista. It is well known in the society of tantra practitioners that she puts her worshipper to extreme challenges before really granting siddhi. For example, sage Vashista himself was plucked off several times in this sadhana despite performing extreme austerities for many many years. As a result the sage did put a curse on Tara-mantra. The success of Brahmananda Giri (of Digamvaritala Bangladesh, the Parapara guru of Krishnananda Agamvaghisha) in this sadhana is a story worth knowing. In the recent past, she was worshipped by Vamdeva or Bamakhypa (the crazy Bama), the Bhairava of Tarapith on the same 'pancha-mundi-asan' (the seat of five skulls) below the Shalmali tree (known as Mundamalinitala) where sage Vashista is supposed to have performed his sadhana.

Amongst the several boons Nilasaraswati grants are poesy and eloquence. Moreover, she grants 'vaksiddhi' for free or resides in the tounge of the worshipper, and, this is the precise reason that explains her name. Brihannilatantra is a source to know more of her.

Stotra is from Brihannilatantra,
edited by Ramachandra Bhatt and Harabhata Shastri, published by the Kashmir Mercantile Press, Srinagar in 1938.
